Requisition papers were sent to Albany on Monday by the Pennsylvania authorities and Sheriff Norris expects to go after the bird this week. The entire gang will soon be captured. Burglars will learn to keep away from Cameron county, we think. Our sleuths never sleep.

Old Offender Caught.

On the 28th of June, last year, a woodsman named Lyman Bush was "held-up" while returning from his work at Kelly's camp, Hicks Run, and robbed of $93.00. The suspected robber was lately arrested upon another charge and locked up at Erie, and will be brought to Emporium, charged with the Hicks Run hold-up. The authorities expect to capture the last of the gang, two men, within a few days. The penitentiary will contain quite a Cameron colony if these depredations continue.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Woolley departed on Wednesday for Ishpeming, Mich., where Mr. Woolley has secured a lucrative position as assistant superintendent with the Pluto Powder Manufacturing Company. Mr. Woolley is an expert powder man and the Pluto Powder Company are to be congratulated upon securing his services. Meeting Notice.

The University Society will hold its regular meeting in the Parish House next Monday, June 20th, at 8:00 o'clock.

C. E. PLASTERER.

Mrs. Green Improving.

The PRESS received cheering news from Judge Green yesterday relative to Mrs. G's condition, who was taken to University Hospital, Philadelphia, last Saturday. Dr. Richard Norris, an eminent physician of that city and an acknowledged authority, made an examination, assisted by Drs. S. S. Smith and Carl Lee Felt, and came to the conclusion "that an operation was not at all necessary and that she would continue to improve by treatment." This is cheering news to Judge Green and family, as well as their many friends. They are expected home within a few days.

Has the Sand.

W. G. Gilbert accepted a wager of $5.00 with Jas. B. Hayes, on Friday last, that he dare not work on the ditch with the men laying a sewer on Broad street. W. G., took up the wager, got busy and handled the tools like an old stager for one-half a day, won the money, accepted the contractors $1.00, ook a hot bath (?) and got up early the next morning as fresh as a daisy.

Big Anniversary Numbers.

Next Monday will be the third anniversary of the opening of the Theatorium and the management are making arrangements to give their patrons the best attractions, in both vaudeville and reels, they can secure. The management are careful that only clean attractions are presented, thereby guarding against the presenting of pictures or vaudeville of the least objectionable character, thereby making it perfectly safe for ladies and children to attend. This precaution accounts for large attendance every evening at this popular place of amusement. Hundreds never miss an evening. Remember, next Monday evening the attractions will be unusually attractive and the price will be the same—ten cents—for the big show.

Cabbage Setting Bee.

A Cabbage setting bee was held at the Climax farm on Saturday, June 4th at which time 9, 500 plants was set out. Mr. Arthur Cousins carried off the honors of the day having set out 450 plants in nine minitues. Mr. Cousins says that in favorable conditions he can set out at least 3,000 plants in an hour. If all these cabbage plants mature into good cabbages there will be enough cabbage to make sourkraut for entire Cameron county.

Teachers Elected.

The following teachers were elected at the last meeting of the Emporium School Board to serve during the coming term: Prof. C. E. Plasterer, principal, was re-elected for the next three years; Prof. W. G. Briner, of Carlisle, Pa., first assistant; Miss Lora McQuay, second assistant; Miss Brooks, third assistant. The following teachers were elected for the grades: Prof. R. H. Edgar, Miss Alice Quigley, Miss Margaret Nickler, Miss Cora Barker, Miss Mame Cleary, Miss Eva Lewis, Miss Mary Welsh, Miss Blanche Ludlam, Miss Alvira Farr, Miss Margaret Weisenfluh, Miss Marion Larrabee, Miss Rose Gayney, Miss Bessie McQuay and Miss Nina Bryan.

At Theatorium.

Thursday evening—DeMonde and Dinsmore present a novelty comedy, "The Two in White," assisted by their trained dog Dixie—the brightest canine in vaudeville. 17 minutes of hilarity. Don't miss it.

Friday night they present their newest effort, "A Stormy Knight," A Matrimonial Tempest. The ladies should see this act.

Saturday night a Rural Comedy, offering Josiah Long, "From Hamden's Corners." Fun fast and furious. A cyclone of laughter. Not a dull moment.

Hicks Run, P. O. S. of A.

On Saturday evening, June 11th, members of Camps No. 562, North Bend; No. 88, Renovo; No. 136 Sinnamahoning, and 382 of Emporium went to Hicks Run and instituted a new Camp of P. O. S. of A. Sixty-five members were present and signed the constitution of the new Camp. The Camp is composed of a fine lot of young men and will, in a short time, be one of the largest Camps in the district. District President, W. F. Summerson, of North Bend, had charge of the Institution, the work being done by the North Bend Degree Team, and was performed in an able manner. The Hicks Run Band met the visiting brothers at the station and marched them into town with martial music. After the services of instituting the Camp, the visiting members were invited to the banquet room where the ladies of Camp 39, P. O. of A., were waiting with a bounteous supply of good things, which were much enjoyed by all. While the visitors were eating, the District President installed the officers of the new Camp, after which they all came to the banquet hall and partook of refreshments. An address was given by Mr. George Morton, of Camp 88, Renovo, who extended the thanks of the visiting brothers to the Daughters of America, who were joined in the noble work of their order and for the splendid banquet that was furnished by them. Owing to there being no train out of the place until the next afternoon, the visiting brothers were invited home with the Hicks Run brothers. Before leaving the hall the Supt. of the Sunday school gave them all an invitation to visit the school, at 10:30 Sunday morning, which was cordially accepted and we can truly say that they have a fine Sunday School. The singing was very nice and the lessons were explained in an able manner by the teachers. The day and night being spent, as we hope for some good to the people of Hicks Run and the visiting members, we left on train at 3:20 P. M., for home, with best wishes for the new Camp, the P. O. of A., and the Hicks Run Sunday School.

A bounteous dinner was served at one o'clock, p. m., and the main feature was an old fashioned chicken pie, which was hugely enjoyed by all the participants. After dinner the men of this merry party enjoyed the afternoon at target shooting and hunting for wood-chucks. The ladies devoted the afternoon to social conversation and fortune telling, over which all had a good laugh. Mrs. J. Willis Gaskill acted as "Sybil." This was a most enjoyable affair and the reunions are looked forward to each year with great anticipation of pleasure. Mr. and Mrs. Leggett with their family, are royal entertainers and the reunion being held at their home is proof that all present had a good time.

Bibles of the World.

The so-called "Bibles of the World" number six, as follows: The Koran of the Mohammedans, the Tri Pitikes of the Buddhists, the Five Kings of the Chinese, the Three Vedas of the Hindoos, the Zandavesta of the Persians and the Scriptures of the Christians. The Koran is the most recent of these sacred writings, dating from the seventh century, while the oldest is the Zandavesta, going back thousands of years before the birth of Christ.—Literary Digest.

A Bright Blacksmith.

The greatest improvement in vehicle construction was when some bright blacksmith thought of heating the tires and shrinking them on the wheel. While many claim the honor, it is not known to whom it rightly belongs. Previously to this event tires were made in short sections and held on the felloes with nails. When starting on a long haul the driver always laid in a good supply of nails to use on the trip.—Shop Notes Quarterly.

Degrees of Quarrel.

I will name you the degrees. The first, the retort courteous; the second, the quip modest; the third, the reply churlish; the fourth, the reproof valiant; the fifth, the countercheck quarrelsome; the sixth, the lie with circumstance; the seventh, the lie direct; all these you may avoid but the lie direct, and you may avoid that, too, with an if.—Shakespeare, "As You Like It."

Rabbitville Saves Its Money.

A feller was hear trying to raze muney to put a fence around the graveyard, but Me and the leading citizens refused to put up a cent for such a useless expense. Them that is berried there can't get out, and us fellers what is out don't want to get in. So whyfore is a fence needed?—Rabbitville Correspondence Dallas (Ore.) Optimist.

The Autocrat's Story.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes used to tell a story to the effect that a man called early one evening to see his pastor, and a little girl of 9 opened the door to him. "Father is not at home," she said, "but, if you have come to talk about your soul, you had better come in, for I understand the whole plan of salvation."

Peculiar Form of Rent.

The vicar of Hallerton, near Kettering, England, has to provide every year two hare pies and some barrels of ale as the rent for a portion of his glebe land. They were duly consumed the other day in front of the rectory.

Rather Rude.

The manners of some omnibus conductors leave much to be desired. A lady wearing a fashionable hat entered an empty omnibus. "Hon you go, Bill! Full up!" shouted the conductor to the driver.—London Punch.

Crab That Climbs Trees.

"As awkward as a crab," does not apply on some of the South Sea islands, for a crab is found there that not only runs as fast as an average man, but climbs trees with the ease of a schoolboy.

A Conscientious Declaration.

Drummer—Will you be mine? All my life I will worship you from February until April and from August until December. The rest of the time I am on the road.—Fliegende Blatter.

Subject for Debate.

Wealth and Happiness.

The mediocrity of my fortune has, perhaps, given me more real happiness than the first throne on earth would have given.—Fenelon.

Heaven.

If there is a heaven the angels who do the work there probably never have to fret because the ones who sit around get the credit.

Life's Lesson.

Life is a lesson in compromise, and we are never further from being satisfied than when we have got all we want.

WHY THE ELEPHANT

ANALYSIS OF VOTERS' FONDNESS FOR THE BEAST.

Stubborn, Unyielding, Yet Intellectual, the Symbol of Republicanism Has Weight With the People for Good Reasons.

It is very easy to fall out of patience with the Republican party. For of all thick-skinned, self-satisfied, ponderous, immovable animals, it is undoubtedly the worst. Some poet it surely was, with an imagination that saw into the essential heart of things, who dubbed it the elephant. When once it has taken its stand you can jab all day without budging it. Building a fire underneath is about the best way of obtaining progress.

Now just why the American people prefer to deal with such an irresponsive brute is often hard to comprehend. The big point in his favor, of course, is his intelligence. When he does move, he moves in the right direction; for he happens to possess the ablest intellectuals in the business. But a little less intelligence and a somewhat more obliging spirit would surely do as well by the country and every one would be in a much more amiable frame of mind. So, why the elephant,

The answer is unfortunately all too plain. It was given only the other day, for example, in an inconspicuous observation of the Hon. Champ Clark, Democratic leader in the house of representatives. Said he of the Republican proposition to give plenary powers of investigation to the tariff board:

"The house Democrats are united in their opposition to it."

Think of it! Here at last is a chance for the country to obtain the information which everyone wants—the facts whereupon a proper revision of the tariff by any party can alone be made. And the Democrats will unanimously oppose it—for fear, of course, that it may help the Republicans get together! Of course, the facts would ultimately, if the Democratic dogma is correct, annihilate the Republican party. But never mind that. Hang the principle of the thing—or even its far-sighted expediency. Let's be as pettily partisan as we can, say the Champ Clark Democrats.

Is it any wonder that with such a bray resounding in the air the American people turn back peevishly to the stubborn old elephant?—New York Evening Sun (Ind.).

What the Tariff Law Is Doing.

The volume of business throughout the country as shown by the bank clearings continues to increase. The indications at the beginning of March were fully borne out by the figures for the entire month, in which nearly every financial center of importance showed material improvement over March of a year ago. Total clearings for the United States, according to the returns of the New York Chronicle, are $15,017,000,000, an increase of 19 per cent. This is the highest March total yet recorded, and shows that all the ground lost during the panic has been made up. The total for March, 1909, was $12,621,000,000; for 1908, $9,798,000,000; 1907, the previous high record, $14,657,000,000; 1906, $13,007,000,000; 1905, $12,918,000,000. Early returns for April show continued activity. The increase for the first week amounted to 11 per cent. Totals for the first three months of the year tell the same story; the 1910 figures being $45,267,000,000, as compared with $29,958,000,000 in 1908 and $41,817,000,000, the previous high record, in 1906.

Kern's Great Record.

The Democrats of Indiana are justly proud of the record of John W. Kern, and they are going to give him an opportunity to embellish it.

It is Mr. Kern's peculiar distinction to have carried the colors of his party to defeat in more elections than any man in the candidate business. Time and again has glorious defeat perched on the Kern banner in state elections, and we believe the Kern escutcheon is as yet unsullied by a single victory.

As Mr. Bryan's running mate he carried his remarkable talent into the national field, and his neat reputation as a hoodoo contributed materially to the result in the pivotal state of Indiana. In the coming senatorial election he will in all probability add a defeat by Mr. Beveridge to his record. Mr. Kern is an estimable gentleman, and he has our best wishes for his kind of success.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Remedy Has No Attraction.

We have no doubt that there is one sure remedy for high prices. It is easy, too, if the country is ready to try it. Simply take the tariff off of everything. The wage earner's job will vanish and he'll have no money to purchase what the farmer raises at any price. The resultant fall in prices would be something fierce.—Rockville (Ind.) Times.

The Republican party points to 50 years of administration, to 50 years of control, and upon the record of those 50 years in every department of human life in America the Republican party is willing to stand, but it wants a right to insist that the people be given all the facts.—Elmira Advertiser.

When we get the Democrats on the run next fall, Halley's comet will seem to be standing still.—Springfield Union.

TREASURY TO SHOW SURPLUS

Wise Administration of Country's Finances Under Republican Rule Is Proved.

When the present congress assembled in special session a little more than a year ago economy was the watchword on every side, because the treasury was confronted with a deficit of $60,000,000 at the end of the fiscal year ending with June, 1909. While some improvement in revenue was expected as a result of the revision of the tariff and because of improving business, there was a settled belief that the fiscal year 1910 would also show a good deficit.

Now at the close of the tenth month of the present year the federal treasury is found to be in a very strong position. Instead of a deficit the present fiscal year now promises to close with a substantial surplus. The government's receipts for the ten months show an increase of $50,500,000 over the corresponding ten months in 1909, the increase being shown in both tariff duties and internal revenue receipts. On the other hand the ordinary expenditures of the government for the same ten months have decreased about $2,000,000.

The deficit for the ten months is $16,700,000, against a deficit in the previous year of $69,236,000. But the treasury has paid out since July 1, 1909, $27,000,000 on the Panama canal account. No bonds have yet been sold to make good this expenditure, so that the treasury has really to its credit on the operations for the year so far about $10,500,000.

The last two months of the fiscal year will probably show surpluses and at the end of the fiscal year the corporation tax will be turned into the treasury, the revenue from this source amounting probably to between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000. This would bring the total surplus for the year up to $40,000,000. It is very clear from this that the treasury will have plenty of money for all purposes from now on, and that the nightmare of possible bond issues has passed.

Barometer of Trade.

The production of iron in the United States during the month of March was at a slightly smaller daily rate than prevailed during the winter, but was still higher than any earlier record. The total for the month of March reached 2,615,000 tons, as compared with 1,836,000 in March, 1909, and 1,288,000 in March, 1908. The total for the 12 months ending March 31, 1910, amounted to 27,703,000 tons, as compared with 17,611,000 tons during the same period of 1908-9, and 22,166,000 tons in the corresponding period of 1907-8.

Money circulation in the United States continues to expand, the treasury department's monthly statement giving the total at $3,138,000,000 or $34.87 per capita, on April 1, 1910. In 1909 it was $34.85 and in 1908, $28.25.

All Will Indorse Bill.

One thing, however, has been determined without doubt: The president and the entire legislation of this congress, including the tariff bill enacted at the special session, will be indorsed in the platform of every Republican convention. Even those Insurgents who voted against the tariff bill admit that they must indorse now this Republican measure which has proved so successful and beneficial to the people. It is true that the measure of indorsement may vary at different state conventions, but for the most part it will be satisfactory to the president and the party leaders. There can be no criticisms of a bill that has proved to be so successful, not only in the raising of revenue but in bringing about prosperity to all classes of people.

Right Man for Supreme Bench.

The country needs men in public stations who will do justice to all men and to all classes and it is especially upon the bench that men of that kind are needed. President Taft's remarks were called forth by certain criticisms upon his appointment of Governor Hughes to the Supreme bench of the United States and it is gratifying to know that he made a vigorous and of course successful defense of that appointment. Governor Hughes is just the kind of a man the country needs in a place of great power and responsibility.—Denver Republican.

Prosperity at High Tide.

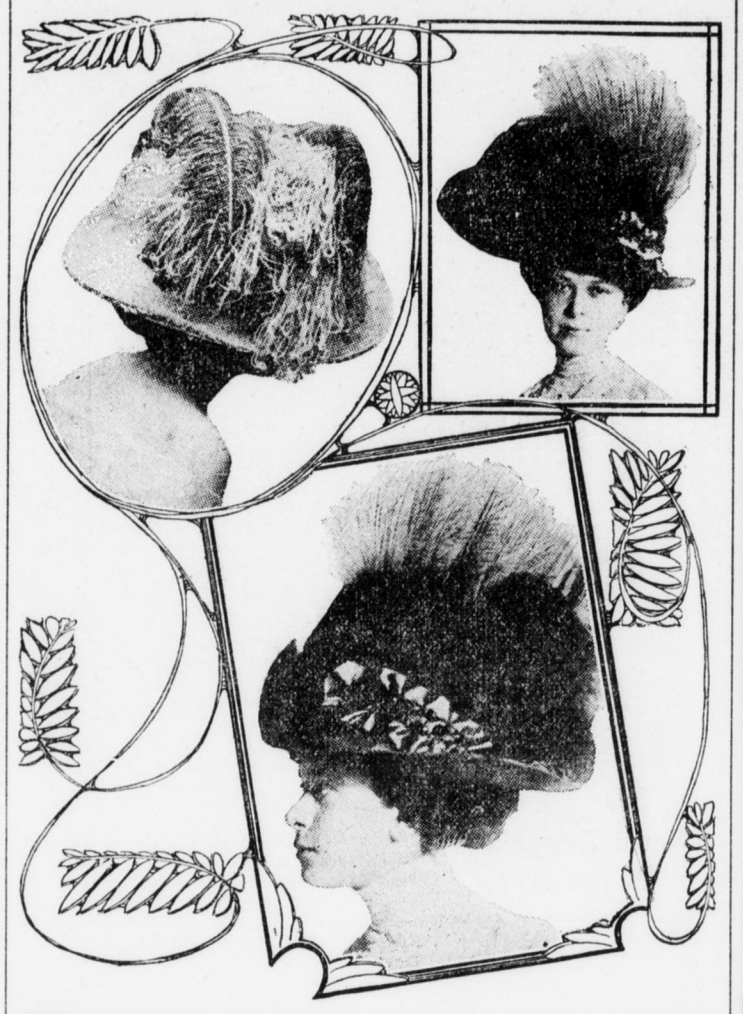
A New York dispatch: "While dull spots can be picked out here and there in the business situation it must be admitted that the United States is enjoying prosperity never before equaled in its history. The farmers never were so rich in cash and surplus produce. The mills were never so full of work and with so many orders in advance on their books. Consumers everywhere are paying record prices for food, clothing and amusement. The balance of trade is running against the United States, proving that Americans are drawing heavily on Europe for luxuries.

Bryan's Objection Natural.

Bryan scores severely the appointment of Hughes. Two years ago the ablest speaker on the Republican hustings, the one who most thoroughly analyzed Bryan and his speeches, was Hughes. More, even than the speeches of Taft did those of Hughes contribute to the discomfiture of Bryan.—Sioux City Tribune.

President Taft should feel proud of some of the enemies he has made.—Baltimore American.

The Grace of Plumes



THE diaphanous picture hats in black or white, and the dead white of chip hats, makes a back ground upon which the fancy of the designer can pose her "dreams of beauty," in materials and colors. Many colored ostrich plumes have provided color combinations that vie with those in flowers. Ostrich, in two or three shades of one color, in two or three colors, and even in brilliant dashes of many colors in the same plume have been brought out and placed in the hands of milliners throughout the country. It is the grace of plumes that endears them to the heart of every designer of really beautiful millinery. If securely fastened by the stem to the body of the hat and left to its own sweet will (or curve, rather), and the law of gravity, the ostrich feather will dispose its length most gracefully. The trimmer cannot improve these lines which nature has drawn with the supple quill and dainty flumes. Blown by the wind the airy fibers move in graceful lines and come back to rest in the original positions that they held before they were disturbed. This is true of the "skeleton" willow ostrich (plumes with tied flumes) more especially. In tying the flumes to lengthen them, the manufacturer is able to introduce new colors or shades and produce blended harmony or contrast, as he desires.

These plumes are light in weight and very beautiful. In black they have a tendency to come to pieces. For some reason the black dye so effects the feather that moisture makes it shrink or "crawl" and the knots untie. But in colors they wear fairly well. Women have been buying fragile materials too long to dispense with willow plumes on that account.

The natural ostrich plume with wide spread of fibers, slightly curled, should be selected if one is buying black. A good ostrich plume, moderately heavy, and made of uniformly good stock, will prove about the most lasting article and the most satisfactory in which the investor in millinery can put her money. Two plumes of this character will do service summer and winter. They are at their loveliest on the black picture hat for midsummer. This hat, of hemp or hair braid, with broad, sweeping flare of brim, through which the light filters, is the ideal model for a "stunning" effect. It is cool looking and always distinguished. In white with plumes in white and black it looks as chaste as frost, and throws a becoming reflection upon the skin of the wearer. The wide brims require this sweep of plumes in which trimmers delight.

CLEAR SKIN A NECESSITY

Claim to Beauty Cannot Be Admitted Without the Possession of That Charm.

The fascination of a clear, fair skin is recognized by every woman. No matter how regular her features, if the skin is blotched a woman loses all her power to attract. A good skin is an evidence of health, pure blood and right living. Powder will not cover an imperfect complexion, but will give it a mottled, livid appearance. A new preparation gives a soft, youthful bloom to the skin, will not show and is absolutely beneficial in every way. It contains no zinc, peroxide or white lead, and may be used on a baby—surely a perfect test of its purity. It will remove the tired, old expression engendered by pain or fatigue and the haggard look which the bustle of modern life will give to even a youthful face. Rarely indeed can a beautifier be found which cannot be detected, and the obvious use of cosmetics robs a woman of that air of refinement which makes a lady. A fresh, natural appearance exacts willing admiration from either sex, and such is certainly to be obtained by the use of this dainty preparation.

NEW NAPOLEON HAT.

As in foulards and other silk materials the polka dot is a favorite in the mixtures of silk and cotton.

SOME OLD FRIENDS RETURN

An inspection of the materials for summer wear show that certain old-time, reliable materials have returned under new names, but our mothers will recognize their friends in the shape of the coarse linens that resemble "oatmeal" cloth, hopsacking and the various basket weaves.

The feature that commends itself to many women is the fact that the weave is so evident that it serves for decoration, and, therefore, requires very little other ornamentation. Simple braiding designs or buttons are generally sufficient for the morning dress, while the square meshes of these coarse fabrics form excellent backgrounds upon which designs in cross-stitching (done with woolen or linen threads) may be added.

When the individual touch of embroidery is added, these materials are excellent for afternoon wear, and although the design is more conventional than the trailing vines worked by the weavers of 50 years ago, the effect warrants the time expended in the construction.

To Use India Print.

Here is something unique and yet beautiful, that will not fade and is by no means too old-looking for a little girl.

India print is an altogether desirable and durable stuff in color and quality, and can be used on fine or coarse white linen without the least danger of the colors spreading into the white surface.

Buttons covered with the print will add style and then, too, the end of material you have left will do for a band round the dark blue or white straw hat.

Biscuit Color Liked.

Biscuit color is in great demand.

Of course, it is perishable, but dear to the heart of woman.

WIND'S GREAT GEOLOGICAL POWER

by GEORGE FREDERICK WRIGHT A. M., LL. D.

COPYRIGHT BY JOSEPH B. BOWLES.

THOSE who live in the well-watered portions of the world, where rich vegetation covers the surface and protects it from the denuding force of the wind, can have little realizing sense of the effectiveness of this ever-active geological agency. Yet even in some well-watered regions dunes are familiar phenomena. Dunes are simply "drifts" of sand, closely resembling the snowdrifts of winter and protection against them is secured by similar means. As in snowy regions one sees long lines of close board fences some distance from the windward side of the railroad to stop the drifting snow on its onward career, so he may in many places see windbreaks to stop the drifting sand. But in many cases where the windbreak is not sufficient a constant force of workmen is necessary to remove the sand from the track at stated intervals or after every unusually severe storm. At such places the railroad companies, to their sorrow, learn the enormous power of this constantly acting geological force in transferring finely comminuted earthy material from one place to another.

SAND DUNES SOUTH OF LAKE MICHIGAN

One of the best known localities for observing dunes is found on the southeastern shore of Lake Michigan. Nearly all, if not all, the railroads approaching Chicago from the east pass through this series of dunes as they come around the southern end of the lake. Many of the dunes are very fresh, with no covering of vegetation, and rise, like snowdrifts, 50 feet or more above the general level. Others are of such age that they have been covered more or less with vegetation, trees of considerable size being found upon them. But in all cases the action of the wind, in moving the sand southward from the lake, is evident. The wind blowing from the north keeps an exposure of bare sand upon that side and drifts it over into exposures of equally bare sand upon the outer margin. The width of this belt of dunes around the south end of Lake Michigan averages a little more than one mile. The material, being clean-washed sand, is unfit for agricultural purposes and the area is occupied by very few houses, and those mostly belonging to railway employees.

The source of the material of which these dunes are composed and the rate of its movement are subjects of great interest. The sand is derived, in the first place, from the shores of the lake farther north, which are constantly being eaten into by the waves and currents. All along the western shore, from Evanston to Racine, the waves are wearing away the shore at an average rate of three or four feet per annum. The material that falls into the lake from the bluffs thus eroded is worked over by the waves until the very finest particles are washed out and floated into deep water, while the sand remains near the shore and is gradually washed southward by the prevailing currents. Everyone in Chicago knows how land is forming on the shore, giving rise to legal contests as to ownership. From observations of the United States engineers it was found that 129,000 cubic yards of sand were annually stopped by the two piers which were extended out into the lake to deep water. This vast amount represented, however, but a fraction of the whole amount of sand that was being carried by the currents past Chicago to the south end of the lake.

On reaching the south end of the lake the sand is washed up by the waves during storms and left for a considerable portion of the year exposed to the action of the winds, which have drifted it out into the belt of dunes, with which so large a portion of the traveling public is familiar. But, owing to the fact that the prevailing winds of this region are westerly, the largest accumulation of dunes is found upon the east shore, in Michigan. Travelers upon the Michigan Central railroad cannot fail to have noticed these great drifts of sand, nearly 100 feet high, at Michigan City. This belt of dunes, about a quarter of a mile wide, rising sometimes to more than 100 feet in height, extends northward all along the shore, being specially prominent at St. Joseph and Grand Haven. In many places they threaten to overwhelm whole villages and to compel the railroads to remove their tracks to get out of the way of the drifting material, while in some cases houses and forests have been completely buried out of sight.

It has been profitable to dwell thus fully upon the dunes around the southeastern portion of Lake Michigan, not because they are the largest or the most conspicuous in the world, but because they are the most accessible and the best known to the people of the United States. In some respects a still more interesting belt of dunes occurs in western Nebraska, stretching nearly across the northern part of the state, approximately parallel with the course of the North Platte river, but at a distance of many miles from it. This consists of a belt of sand hills a half-mile or so in width, which is slowly traveling eastward across the state. The prevailing southwest winds are constantly blowing the material from that side and drifting it over onto the northeastern side, thus gradually shifting the line of the belt. So irregular are the drifts, however, that innumerable hollows are left between them, and so slow is the movement that vegetation covers their slopes and water is preserved in them; hence they furnish favorite centers for ranchmen.

The source of the material of this traveling embankment moving so majestically across the western plains of Nebraska and the manner of its movement are even more interesting than the similar phenomena around Lake Michigan. The sand of which this belt of dunes is composed is probably derived from the trough of the Platte river, where during the great floods of a former period it had been brought down from the Rocky mountains and deposited along the banks, whence it was lifted by the winds and started upon its victorious career over the uplands of the interior. The whole movement is exceedingly slow, but it is easily perceptible, especially to those who have built their houses and cultivated their gardens upon the eastern side. But when one considers the vast amount of material that is being transported by the wind along this entire belt the movement is majestic in the extreme.

The arid lands of Utah and Arizona and other portions of the great west afford innumerable illustrations of the activity of wind in drifting sand into regions distant from its original source of supply. The desert of Sahara, Arabia and the region about the Red sea are covered with such moving drifts, but most attention has been attracted to them in the more thickly settled portions of Europe, where they have occasioned the population an immense amount of trouble. The coast of Norfolk, in England is fringed with sand hills 50 or 60 feet in height, where in more than one instance whole villages and ancient churches have been buried by the material. In Eccles the village church in 1839 was almost completely hid by the drifting sand which enveloped it, while 30 years later the same wind which had buried the church uncovered it and exposed it to view upon the other side of the dune. The churches of St. Piran and Gwithian in Cornwall passed through similar experiences, while in 1668 a part of Santon (Sandtown), near Thetford, was overwhelmed by sand which had been slowly blown in from five miles to the west. In the course of a century this dune had traveled four miles and spread over 1,000 acres of land.

The northwestern coast of France is specially exposed to the destructive movement of dunes. On the coast of Gascony "the sea for 100 miles is so barred by sand dunes that in all that distance only two outlets exist for the discharge of the drainage of the interior. As fast as one ridge is driven away from a beach another forms in its place, so that a series of huge sandy billows, as it were, is constantly on the move from the sea margin toward the interior."

The entire coast of Flanders and of Holland and northern Germany is girt with these drifting sand hills. In Holland they sometimes rise to a height of 260 feet, but average only from 50 to 60 feet. Dunes of smaller extent also line the western shore of Ireland and Scotland, but on the Dutch coast they are sometimes as much as five miles wide. On the exposed shores of the Bay of Biscay, where vegetation has not had time to protect them, they are traveling inward at the rate of 16 feet per annum, while in Denmark they are in some places moving as fast as 24 feet per annum. The only method of protection against them, which, happily, is partially successful, is to plant pine forests, which readily grow in the sand and through the production of turpentine become the source of considerable revenue.

Where Our Dolls Are Made

Some Factories in America, But About $2,000,000 Is Contributed Yearly to Foreign Makers.

Dolls have amused the world for ages, and seem to have been well known in the days of the Pharaohs, for, in the tombs of ancient Egypt, figures of painted wood, of terra cotta, of ivory and of rags have been found whose limbs were made movable for the delight of children.

In the ruins of Etruria similar toys have been discovered, and in China, as well as in India, movable figures were made to act from time immemorial by hand and on strings, or as shadows behind a curtain.

The ancient Greeks were experts in the manufacture of puppets, including wax dolls, and several of their poets allude to offerings of dolls to Artemis and Aphrodite, made by maidens before their marriage.

Dolls were evidently first intended to amuse children, but the adults soon adopted them as a source of entertainment. Puppet shows were all the rage in Europe in the sixteenth century, arriving at such perfection that the performances rivaled in attraction those of living actors.

In Covington, Ky., is the largest doll factory in the United States, and there are many other establishments in the eastern states. But the most dolls, and we are sorry to have to say it, the best dolls, are imported, and the American children contribute about $2,000,000 every year to Europe for dolls.

There are some very fine dolls made in England; but the very finest come from France and Germany, and they are made with a degree of perfection most surprising. Even cheap dolls can close their eyes and say "papa" and "mamma." For a little more money you can buy a creeping doll or a walking doll. Then there are dolls that sing—only the music, of course—and the very latest doll is provided with a phonograph, and will recite prose and poetry.

Germany is famous for the manufacture of toys and dolls, and the small town of Sonneberg, in the Thuringian forest, alone produces articles for the amusement of children to the value of $150,000 yearly.

German ladies are expert doll dressers, and there is a yearly Christmas exhibition of dolls at Berlin. A great deal is made of the Berlin doll exhibition, and society turns out in large numbers to patronize it.

There are whole towns in Germany that do little else but make dolls for American children. They are mostly simple country folk. They get small pay for making even an excellent doll, but it must be remembered that their wants are few.

Family Study Valuable.

Speaking to the students in an English women's college, an educator said: "Dig out all your family skeletons. Your relatives will probably be annoyed, but dig them out and face them. Make out your pedigree, tracing your family back to your great-grandfathers and their brothers and sisters. By this means you can learn what traits to avoid and what diseases to guard against. It takes time, tact and temper to hunt back to the record of one's family, but it is worth it. Two men may seem the same, yet one man may hand down disease and crime to his descendants, while the other may hand down only those qualities that are good."

What They Will Do.

The members of the graduating class of Wellesley college are 288 in number and of these only eight will admit that they plan to marry when school days are over. Eighty-six of them except to become teachers, two will be professional farmers, nine will do religious and charitable work, six will adopt literary careers and three will travel, only one expecting to take up domestic science. It is said that but few of the 86 expecting to teach really care for this kind of work. Seventy-three of the class will simply stay at home.

Have You a Baby?

Every woman knows how imperatively necessary it is that baby's things should be absolutely and perfectly clean. She knows the trouble she has with certain yellow soaps that leave the dirt in and often make the little garments harsh and irritating to baby's skin. Easy Task soap—you can get it of your grocer—is the quickest and safest cleanser made; it is antiseptic—and it reduces the work of washing by half.

Her Excuse.

"Why—er—yes," Miss Goodley admitted, "perhaps you did hear me telling the minister I was only twenty-two."

"Oh, I'm surprised!" exclaimed Miss Gaddiet, "and you a Sabbath school teacher, too!"

"But," Miss Goodley protested, "the minister has told us it's always better to understate a thing than to exaggerate."

Third Annual Free Athletic Meet.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 11.—Out of town fans are invited to attend the Third Annual Free Athletic Meet to be given at Forbes Field, Pittsburg, under the auspices of the Pittsburg Press next Saturday, June 18. The meet will be one of the greatest carnivals ever held in the history of athletics with all the best men in the country entered. The railroad companies will make special arrangements for taking care of the excess travel to Pittsburg on that day.

The meet is entirely free to the public, not a cent admission being charged and the gates of the magnificent Forbes Field, the home of the Pittsburg baseball club, being thrown wide open to the public. Neither are there any reservations made for the day, all seats being free. Young and old, rich and poor are invited to attend the games and witness the hair raising battles for supremacy on track and field.

Never has a meet been arranged in this country which presents as many feature events and the carnival is popularly considered as a fitting substitute for the great Olympic games which are not being held this year.

Over forty Olympic and Eastern champions whose names are famous all over the world on account of their achievements in the cinder path game and several hundred local and intercity rivals will clash on that day. The trophies and medals offered to the winners by The Press were secured at an expenditure of something over a Thousand Dollars.

One of the stellar features of the meet will be a world's championship relay race of two miles between the New York A. C. and Irish-American A. C. of New York. The Irish-American team will be composed of Melvin W. Sheppard, the peerless distance runner; W. C. Robbins, Abel Kiviat and Riley. New York A. C. will be represented by a team composed of "Billy" Paull, the famous University of Pennsylvania runner, who holds the mile intercollegiate record at 4:17 4-5; Harry Gissing, Sheppard's great rival in the middle distances, Erick and Bacon. The race will be without doubt one of the greatest ever held in the history of the running game as every entrant is an athlete of natinal fame.

Some of the other Olympic stars who will compete in the meet are Martin Sheridan, the world's greatest all-around athlete; John J. Flanagan, world's champion hammer thrower; Matt McGrath, Flanagan's greatest rival for weight handling honors; Frank Irons, who won the Olympic broad jump with a leap of 24 feet 6½ inches at the London games; Bobby Cloughan, world's record sprinter for 130 yards; Kerr, Canada's champion sprinter, who won the 200 meter race at the London Olympian; Harry F. Porter, Egan Erickson and Burdick, all able to clear 6 feet 3 inches in the high jump; Halpeny, winner of Canadian championship pole vault and able to clear better than 12 feet; Joe Horner, wonderful University of Michigan athlete; Craig, winner of the intercollegiate 220 yard dash from the great "Tex" Ramsdell, at Philadelphia a few weeks ago, and a dozen other stars.

Chicago A. C., Cleveland A. C., Pittburg A. A. and Fort Pitt A. C. will have a four cornered fight for club honors and are signing up all the college stars in the country to compete under their colors.

The opening event of the day's program will be a thrilling 12 mile Marathon race between Emsworth, Pa., and Pittsburg, the last mile being run around the Forbes Field track.

LEWIS.

Mrs. W. W. Lewis, aged 59 years, ten months and five days, died Tuesday, June 7th, 1910, very suddenly at her home on West Sixth Street, after an illness of only about thirty minutes. She leaves a husband and seven children—four daughters and three sons—to mourn her death. Although deceased had not been in the best of health for a year her sudden death was a great shock to the family and friends. Mrs. Lewis was a native of Shippen and had resided here all her life, much loved and respected by all who knew her. This terribly afflicted family certainly have the sympathy of our citizens.

Make Your Dollars Extend.

Our agency will prove that thirty-five years big sales and pleased users of the L. & M. Paint will save you dollars, because when painting with L. & M., you are using metal Zinc Oxide combined with White Lead. Zinc Oxide is imperishable, and makes the L. & M., wear and cover like gold. The L. & M.. colors are therefore bright and lasting. You won't need to repaint for 10 to 15 years, besides L. & M. Paint costs less than any other, say about $1.30 per gallon. Sold by Harry S. Urinary trouble, diabetes.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure them all.

Emporium people endorse our claim.

Mrs. William Swartz, Maple Street, Emporium, Pa., says; "I am very grateful to Doan's Kidney Pills for what they have done for me. My back ached severely and my loins pained me. I could hardly get around to attend to my work and when morning came, I was so tired and languid that I did not feel like getting up. The kidney secretions passed too frequently and gave proof that my kidneys were at fault. On a friend's advice I procured Doan's Kidney Pills from Taggart's Drug Store and their use brought relief, although I had previously taken other remedies without the least effect. I am pleased to give Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement."

A LIGHT ATMOSPHERE.

Why Smoke "Beats Down" When It Leaves a Chimney.

"It's getting ready for a storm. See how the smoke beats down just as soon as it comes out of the chimney? That's because the air is so heavy it pushes the smoke down before it has time to rise."

One often hears this stated as fact concerning that most generally talked of subject on earth, the weather. The speaker was probably right under those conditions in prophesying a storm, but he was scarcely right in assigning as a reason that "the air is so heavy it pushes the smoke down."

Nearly everybody knows it is easier to swim in salt water than in fresh water. As salt water is heavier than fresh water it is evident that the heavier the liquid the greater the buoyant force.

The atmosphere exerts a buoyant force upon the smoke from chimneys in exactly the same way that water exerts a buoyant force upon a swimmer. Therefore when the smoke "beats down" as soon as it leaves a chimney it must be concluded that the buoyant force exerted upon it is relatively small and that the air is not heavy, but light.

A light atmosphere, or, rather, a sudden lessening of the pressure of the atmosphere generally, takes place before a storm. Therefore the smoke from chimneys, if observed intelligently, furnishes a pretty good weather indicator.—Chicago Record-Herald.

VEGETABLE FOODS.

Spinach Rich In Sulphur and Iron, Pumpkin In Phosphorus.

The French have a saying that "parsley is a broom to sweep the stomach." Lettuce is a nerve food. Radishes build tissue and are rich in phosphorus and in iron.

Horseradish contains a higher percentage of sulphur than all the other vegetable roots, spinach ranking next in value. Spinach also contains a large proportion of iron.

A mayonnaise dressing with lettuce is especially desirable for thin people, but for the overplump French dressing is to be recommended. The action of vinegar on the digestive organs, however, is not to be considered. The acid of lemon juice is preferable.

While apples are a most excellent fruit for brain building, which phosphorus aids in, the humble pumpkin, desecrated to the uses of pie and jack o' lanterns, holds the prize. Pumpkin rates 2.79 in phosphorus, while apple is but .45.

When in search for this special element take up a pumpkin diet. But as winter squash would stand the same analysis it can be used as a vegetable in many varieties and thus the needed phosphorus supplied. Cucumbers rank next in phosphorus value to pumpkin, being 2.08.—Vegetarian Magazine.

The Tricky Fox.

A gentleman while hunting near a river one winter day saw a fox run out on the ice and make at full speed for an opening in the ice where the rushing water of the river could be plainly seen from the bank, says the Scotsman. At the edge he stopped, turned, followed his tracks back to the bank and then ran some distance down the stream and sat there. Soon a dog came crashing out of the woods, baying finely, hot on the fox's trail. Now, dogs when on a chase of this kind trust almost entirely to their noses. This one was no exception. He ran along the ice, head down, and when he reached the hole he could not stop, but plunged into the water and disappeared forever. Then the fox trotted away with every sign of satisfaction.

THE EDGE OF HAZARD

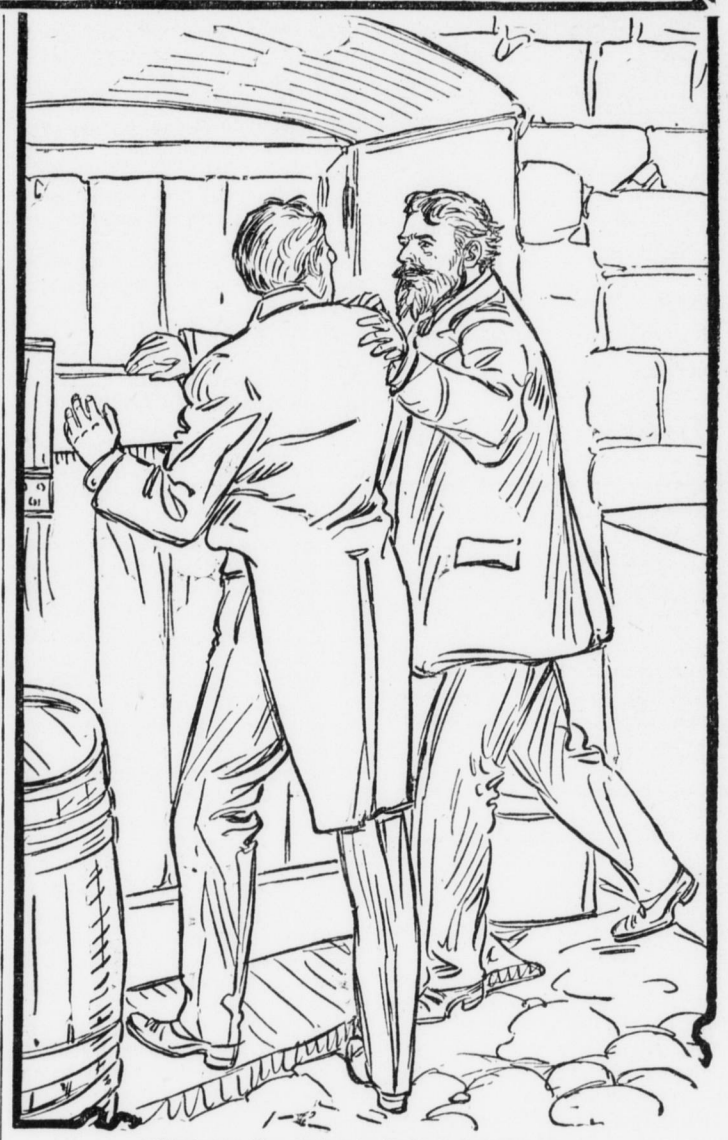
He Suddenly Whipped the Pistol from His Pocket.



"What Are You Going to Do?" Asked the Jew.

SYNOPSIS.

Frederick Hardy, a fashionable Boston society man, lost his wealth, was jilted by a girl and sent by a friend to take charge of an American Trading Company store in Russia. On his journey through Japan he met Stapleton Neville, supposedly an Englishman. They agreed to go together to Russia. Because of suspicious circumstances they were several times molested by the Japanese. Hardy was arrested and found upon his person were papers showing maps of Jap forts. Hardy was proven guiltless. On a train he met Aisome Sano, daughter of a Jap merchant. In Neville's shoes Jap found pictures of forts, proving him to be a Russian spy. Hardy departed for Russia on a steamer, which was wrecked shortly afterward. He was rescued by a Russian steamer. On reaching Vladivostok he was well treated. He started for Siberia, meeting Princess Romanovna on the train. Hardy boarded a vessel for Amur. Hardy showed the princess his expertness as a rifle shot. The steamer was stranded. The princess and her maid were attacked by Chinese. Hardy saved their lives. The princess thanked Hardy for his heroism. Manchurians fired upon the craft. Hardy slew their chief. Burning arrows were hurled upon the Pushkin's decks. An attempt was made to board the vessel. The attacking Chinese were repulsed. Romanoff sneered at Hardy's solicitude for the princess. Stanka, a messenger sent for help, was nailed to a cross on the shore. To put an end to the awful torture Hardy himself put Stanka out of his misery, taking his own life in his hands. Forest fires menaced the vessel. Hardy volunteered to go for help. Refused permission he jumped overboard and started to swim with the princess' distress message. Romanoff was angry at Hardy for his brave efforts to rescue the princess. He wooed her in his own savage way. He said Hardy had made love openly to a Japanese girl. Help came and the princess was rescued. Hardy journeyed on a raft. Arriving at his destination he took charge of the trading company's business. Hardy received a letter from a social leader in Boston and another from Aisome. Hardy took lessons in Russian of a Jew, thus connecting himself in a way with that race. Hardy received a letter from the princess, thanking him for his bravery. Hardy's teacher was in danger of death. He employed Wang as a servant. Hardy went to Moscow, where he was invited to call upon the princess. He started for the palace home of Princess Romanovna. Hardy aroused unaccountable jealousy of his Korean boy by announcing that he was going to call on the princess. He engaged a cabman who drove him to a large house on a poorly lighted street. After entering the house, Hardy discovered that it was a resort of nihilists who supposed he was Felix Hulin come to tell them of a powerful explosive he had discovered. The real Hulin arrived and denounced Hardy as an impostor. The nihilists determined to kill Hardy in order to protect themselves.

At this moment the committee reentered the room. It had transacted its grisly business with dispatch. Kourbski acted as spokesman.

"Mr. Chairman and Brethren," he announced, "we have decided that the most practical method is to bind the prisoner and drive an awl into the base of his brain. We have with us here a shoemaker, who can do the business scientifically. Then, in the early hours of the morning, when the street is deserted, we can throw him into Brother Ivan's cab, drive him to some lonely spot on the banks of the Moskva and drop him into the water."

"The committee already appointed will act in this matter," said Bielinski in a businesslike tone, "with the addition of Brother Ivan, who is a strong man, and the shoemaker."

Ivan and the shoemaker arose and the five men turned toward Hardy, who, during the absence of the committee, had been staring at the mesmeric spot of light on the table.

"Gentleman!" he cried, backing to the wall and speaking with an inspiration born of despair and the immediate presence of a horrible death, "hear me for one word!"

The suddenness of his appeal caused his appointed executioners to halt, while every face in the audience turned toward him in wonderment. "No man is ever executed without being allowed a last word, a farewell. Even the law, which you say is an invention of tyrants, permits that! Surely (as you say that you are killing me in the interest of humanity) you cannot be unjust and savage. All I ask is one word before I die, a parting message, perhaps, to be given to my friends."

"Speak, then," commanded Bielinski, "but be brief, as we have weighty matters to discuss. Do not waste your breath in pleading for mercy."

"I was going to visit the Princess Romanovna," said Hardy, pale as death, but speaking distinctly, "not because I am an aristocrat, for I come from America, the most democratic country on earth. I was invited to visit her because I saved her life on the Amur through my skill with the pistol. My skill, which has made me famous in my native land, enabled me to kill two Chinese who were attempting to abduct her. It is second nature to me. I shoot with absolute precision. Had I my weapon here I could pick off in succession, from where I stand, the buttons on Mr. Bielinski's coat."

"What is that to us?" asked the chairman. "You are talking to gain time. Give us your parting message and we will try to get it to those for whom it is intended."

"I could hit," proceeded Hardy, "that explosive ball yonder, the invention of Mons. Hulin, and blow you all to atoms, and by God! if any one here stirs or attempts to lay hands on me, I'll do it!"

With these words he suddenly whipped the pistol from his pocket, and, leaning forward, aimed at the ball.

CHAPTER XXXI

"In the Name of the Czar!"

The nihilists were thrown into panic by this sudden move on the part of Hardy. For the moment he was in control of the situation, though he was well aware that he could not remain so for long.

The American backed to the door, still aiming at the ball, passed through it after some little nervous fumbling for the knob, closed it behind him and started to run rapidly across the empty room in which he now found himself, not without, however, making an effort to lock the door, which was impossible, as there was no key on the outside, and no bolt.

A savage uproar broke loose in the room which he had just quitted—the sound of men struggling, curses, shouts—and ere he had traversed half the distance of the hall, the door behind him flew open, and a half a dozen nihilists were vomited forth. Several of them were armed, and, pointing pistols at Hardy, they shrieked:

"Drop that revolver, or we shoot! you cannot escape!"

At this moment the hall door was thrown open and a man rushed to Hardy's side. It was Mordecai, the Jew, with his red eyes, his bushy red whiskers his big hook-nose.

"Mr. Hardy!" he cried, "my dear pupil!" and he sprang between the American and the pistols that were pointed at the latter's body. "Stop, brothers, stop!" he shrieked. "What madness is this? What is this man accused of? I know him. He is a friend, I will vouch for him on my life. I will defend him. If you kill him you must kill me, too."

"He is a friend of aristocrats," explained Bielinski, stepping forward; "he entered here by mistake, he says, but it is possible that he is a spy. At any rate, he knows our secret; he has overheard our plans and he will betray us. He must die."

And at this moment a loud hammering was heard on the outer or street door.

"Silence!" gasped Bielinski, in a whisper—a whisper, nevertheless, that could be heard more distinctly in the sudden silence than a shout. "What is that?"

As if in answer to his question, the door opening into the hall flew wide, and the old woman looked in, dishevveled and pale, moaning as she crossed herself rapidly:

"The police! The police!"

Again that thundering on the door sounded through the house, and a stern voice could be heard commanding:

"Open, in the name of the czar!"

Hardy was forgotten. The czar, their archenemy, was at the gates of their fortress and his name was a word of terror. The nihilists flew past the American on tip toe, into the hall, several of them jostling and almost knocking him over in their eagerness to escape.

"Come with me!" whispered Baruch, who had regained his feet. "You must not be found here!"—and seizing Hardy by the arm, he also jumped for the open door. Hardy made no resistance, and was soon running down the long hall with the others, led by the Jew. They came to a narrow flight of stairs, leading to the cellar, and down this they crowded, scrambling and fighting, some of them losing their footing and rolling to the bottom. A loud crash arrested Hardy's attention. He was standing in the darkness, but at the farther end of the hall was a hanging lamp, turned low, and by the light of this he could see the door fly in splinters and the officers of the law pour in.

"Throw your bomb, brother, throw your bomb!" said Bielinski; and Hulin, leaping like a cat into the middle of the passage, hurled the sphere down the hall with an oath. There was a muffled report, not loud, and much jingling of glass. The light went out, but, by the momentary flash of the explosive, Hardy could see several policemen pitch forward on their faces.

"Come, come away!" said Mordecai, and Hardy scurried down the dark cellar steps with the Jew.

CHAPTER XXXII

Hardy Buys an Overcoat.

They were in utter darkness now. Above could be heard a hoarse uproar, faint and confused, shouts and sounds of heavy boots on the flooring; here in the cellar, the shuffling feet of the escaping nihilists, the bump or rattle of an occasional obstruction kicked or run against, muttered oaths. Mordecai, still holding Hardy by the arm, pulled him rapidly across the cellar until they stumbled against the feet of men crawling on their hands and knees. The American pitched forward on the back of one of these, who kicked him savagely and swore a foul oath under his breath.

"Get down," whispered Mordecai, "and crawl, crawl with me!"

They passed through an opening in the wall, so low that it brought the American flat on his stomach, and still scratched his back. That it was barely wide enough for two at a time was evident from the fact that, though he had crowded close to Mordecai, the wall scraped his right side. They were through in a trice and still in utter darkness. The sound of scuffling feet again could be heard—the sound of nihilists fleeing.

"The fools!" muttered Mordecai, "they forgot to put back the stone."

It was evident from his grunts and a scratching sound that he was struggling with some heavy object.

"There," he muttered at last, "it is flush now, and just in time! Listen, my dear pupil, do you not hear them? They are in the cellar. Put your ear against the wall."

Hardy did as was requested, and he could indeed hear faint sounds on the other side of the wall.

"Where are we now?" he asked.

"We are in the cellar of the adjoining house, belonging to a member of the Order. The brothers have escaped by an underground passage—by an old forgotten sewer. But it will not be safe for you to follow them. They will have recovered their wits by this time and some of them will lie in wait for you and kill you, feeling sure that you will tell what you have seen and heard."

Hardy's eyes were becoming accustomed to the darkness, and in the distance he could see a slit of dim gray light. He felt his way to it, striking a barrel and hitting his head against a hanging shelf on the way. By the sense of touch he assured himself that he had arrived at the cellar window, boarded up, and that the slit of gray light came through an imperfect joining. The door must be somewhere near. With his fingers against the wall, he took several steps to the left without finding it; then he returned to the right, made the same experiment, and his efforts were rewarded with success.

Mordecai was at his side.

"What are you going to do?" asked the Jew.

"I am going to walk boldly out of this door," replied Hardy. "The explosion will have drawn the whole neighborhood to the front of the house, on the other street, and I shall not be noticed. If I am, I can explain how I came here, and how I escaped. I am going to chance it, and the quicker I go the better"—and he pushed back the heavy bolt which he had found by this time. "Good-by, my friend, and thank you. I suppose you will rejoin your brethren. You have saved my life and I shall never forget it. For your sake, I will say nothing about what I have seen and heard this night. The nest is broken up for the present and the police do not seem to need my aid."

The American walked a couple of squares, then turned sharply to the right and gained the main street. He was safe now, and he hailed a passing cab, ordered the isvoschik to take him to the Slaviansky Bazar. As he stood on the walk, waiting for the vehicle to draw up, he felt chilly and, his excitement having subsided somewhat, he made a discovery that gave him a shock and filled him with a feeling of uneasiness that was destined to possess him for many days to come.

He had left his overcoat behind somewhere in that den of nihilists. He got into the cab, and, as it tore through the streets, the wheels squeaking in the snow, he sat there shivering, his chin in his hand, racking his brain to remember, if possible, whether there was anything in the pockets, a letter, cards, a cigar-case, that might betray the identity of the owner. To save his life he could not settle this point in his mind.

It was late when he reached the hotel, and just as the gray light of dawn began to sift in through the curtains, he fell into a sound slumber. It was fully ten o'clock when he went out into his office and sent for his coffee. As he was drinking it, Wang entered in great excitement, with a newspaper.

"Look at this!" cried the boy. "The police raided a den of nihilists last night, and the latter threw a bomb, killing four of the officers and wounding six others. It was the society known as 'The Enemies of Russia,' made up of disaffected Russians, Poles, Finns, even Jews—all who hate this accursed government."

"Why are you an enemy of Russia?" he asked.

"Oh, for no particular reason," faltered the boy, turning pale. "I—perhaps I am not. And the nihilists all disappeared, as though the earth had swallowed them up. Not a thing was left to prove the identity of a member, except one costly, fur-lined overcoat, which proves that this society numbers among its members some of the wealthier classes, perhaps of the nobility. I tell you"—and Wang struck the paper with his right hand in his excitement—"that this country is a house divided against itself. Leave it alone, and it will work out its own destruction and salvation!"

The boy's eyes were flashing now and his cheeks were so aflame with excitement that the scar nearly disappeared.

Hardy gulped down his coffee and started for the door.

"If anybody calls for me, Wang," he said, "tell them that I will be back in an hour."

He did return in that time, wearing an exact duplicate of the overcoat that he had lost the night before. And still there was no sign of the police. He felt reassured. Had there been any telltale letters, cards or documents in the pockets of the missing garment, the officers of the law, he reasoned, would have lost no time in laying hands on him.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Hardy Makes a Call.

The Princess Romanovna was attired in a gown of pale blue silk, decollete, trimmed with dainty cream lace. Her neck was encircled by a string of pearls, of priceless purity, evenness of size and perfection of form. There was something in the creamy softness and whiteness of her skin, faintly, almost imperceptibly glowing with the warm, red hue of health and youth, that suggested the delicate tinting of the interior of a sea-shell, or foam shot through with the first rays of the morning sun, and the pearls seemed at home with such a background.

Her shoulders were so exquisitely modeled that revealment became a duty and a matter of course. Immodesty is the child of ugliness. Her arms were round and firm and beautiful; when she bent them, there was no angle at the elbow, or unsightly projection, but a perfect, graceful curve, and when she straightened them out, the skin did not wrinkle there and corrugate, but dimpled ravishingly.

As he arose from the chair in which he sat awaiting her entrance, Hardy, accustomed to fashionable and high-bred women, noticed, as she advanced toward him with welcoming hand extended, that her soft, light hair was parted in the middle and combed low over her broad forehead, and that the thick, glossy knot, confined in an invisible net, was set low down at the nape of her neck.

She held her head high and haughtily as head of a queen, yet her red, full lips parted in a dazzling smile, and perfect friendliness shone from her blue eyes.

"I received your note at ten o'clock this morning," she said in French, in the most natural way in the world, as though she had seen him only yesterday, "and, fortunately, I had no unavoidable engagement until 11."

They stood in the center of a luxurious salon, flooded with a soft, rose-colored light from electric bulbs ingeniously disposed about the ceiling.

"I was very sorry," he replied, "to disappoint myself last evening, and also to put you to any possible annoyance in waiting for me. But, the fact is—"

"But," she exclaimed, in her own tongue, "you are positively speaking Russian! And so perfectly, too! I can hardly believe my ears. It is incredible! But don't let's remain standing here like two posts. Sit down, over here, and we will have a nice cozy talk. I can give you two full hours."

She crossed the room to a low divan and seated herself comfortably on one end of it, among a mass of luxurious pillows.

Hardy took his place beside her and said, easily:

"Th hope of conversing with you some time in your own tongue, princess, has been a great incentive to me in my studies of Russian. Without that incentive, I should scarcely have made such progress as you are kind enough to credit me with."

He was at home now, more at home than in the store at Stryetensk, or in the wholesale houses of the Moscow merchants, and these words of delicate flattery came naturally to his lips. The princess flashed one quick, searching look at him. The man was a gentleman, in the conventional sense, as well as a hero, and no more afraid of a princess than of a Chinese brigand.

"So you learned Russian that you might talk with me?" she laughed with a slight tinge of coquetry. "How perfectly charming! But," she pouted, "I fear that your desperate struggle with the terrible Russian tongue is but a poor compliment to my French. Did you then find that so unintelligible?"

"Not at all," he replied, "except as far as my own poor mastery of it rendered it so. But my desire to converse with you in Russian was quite natural. I used often to wish that I could understand you when you were talking on the Amur steamer. Besides, Russian, as spoken by you, seemed a very beautiful language, and one well worth acquiring."

She did not see fit to pursue this topic further.

"You shall always speak Russian with me, then. By the way, have you heard anything further from your heroic friend, Smulders? I hope you have not lost all trace of him. I should so like to know how his love affair with the fair but tantalizing 'Chulia' came out."

"Of that I am able to inform you, as I have recently heard from Smulders. He and 'Chulia' are married and living in Amsterdam. Smulders is in the seventh heaven of happiness."

The princess clapped her little hands with joy.

"Isn't it delightful," she exclaimed, "to hear of a love affair that ends happily? And I have no doubt that 'Chulia' will settle down into a sensible, affectionate wife, and repay him for all his sufferings. Was that not a terrible happening last night, the killing and wounding of those poor officers? The nihilists are becoming bolder and bolder every day. Only the severest measures will stamp out this evil of nihilism. There is no other way to deal with these misguided men, who, if they could only be made to see it, are their own worst enemies. Could they know how it grieves the Little Father to be severe with any of his children, they would not resort to violence. I am sorry for the families of the killed and wounded officers! I have started a subscription for them, which has already been generously responded to."

"May I put my name down for a small amount?" asked Hardy.

Hardy noticed that the list was headed "Elizabetha Romanovna, 1,000 roubles," and that several others had contributed equal sums. The last name thus far obtained, and next to which Hardy must sign, was that of Boris Romanoff, who was down for 2,090 roubles.

AFTER SUFFERING ONE YEAR

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Milwaukee, Wis. — "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me a well woman, and I would like to tell the whole world of it. I suffered from female trouble and fearful pains in my back. I had the best doctors and they all decided that I had a tumor in addition to my female trouble, and advised an operation. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman and I have no more backache. I hope I can help others by telling them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me." — MRS. EMMA IMSE, 833 First St., Milwaukee, Wis.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women after all other means have failed, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

SURELY NO PLACE FOR HER

In the Presence of Such Magic There Seemed But One Thing for Maid to Do.

Prof. Percival Lowell, the eminent Martian astronomer, said in a recent interview in New York:

"The Martian canals are not Panama canals. The word 'canals,' you know, really means 'lines.' It shouldn't be taken literally, as the servant girl in Boston took the parlor magic.

"An amateur magician in a Beacon street house was going through his tricks while a maid passed in and out with refreshments.

"The magician was reading letters placed under a rug as the maid brought in a tray of lemon ices.

"'What is this?' a spectator asked.

"'That is B,' the magician answered; and, sure enough, his answer was correct.

"The maid looked with astonishment at the letter which had been hidden under the thick rug. She turned her gaze on the handsome young magician who had read it. Then, setting down her tray of ices, she hid her rosy face in her hands and ran out of the room.

"'What's the good o' me clothes?' she cried."

An Unusual Attribute.

Little Johnnie, who cannot pronounce S, has been frightened into keeping out of the attic by tales told by his nurse of a dreadful ghost that lives in the dim recesses under the eaves. The other day he was overheard to say confidentially to a small friend:

"We've got an old gho't up in our attic!"

To which his friend, much interested, responded: "Do he butt?"

Easy for Him.

Tommy's Mother—Why aren't you a good boy, like Willie Bjones?

Tommy—Huh! It's easy enough for him to be good; he's sick most of the time.—Philadelphia Record.

HARD ON CHILDREN.

When Teacher Has Coffee Habit.

"Best is best, and best will ever live." When a person feels this way about Postum they are glad to give testimony for the benefit of others.

A school teacher down in Miss. says: "I had been a coffee drinker since my childhood, and the last few years it had injured me seriously.

"One cup of coffee taken at breakfast would cause me to become so nervous that I could scarcely go through with the day's duties, and this nervousness was often accompanied by deep depression of spirits and heart palpitation.

"I am a teacher by profession, and when under the influence of coffee had to struggle against crossness when in the school room.

"When talking this over with my physician, he suggested that I try Postum, so I purchased a package and made it carefully according to directions; found it excellent of flavor, and nourishing.

"In a short time I noticed very gratifying effects. My nervousness disappeared, I was not irritated by my pupils, life seemed full of sunshine, and my heart troubled me no longer.

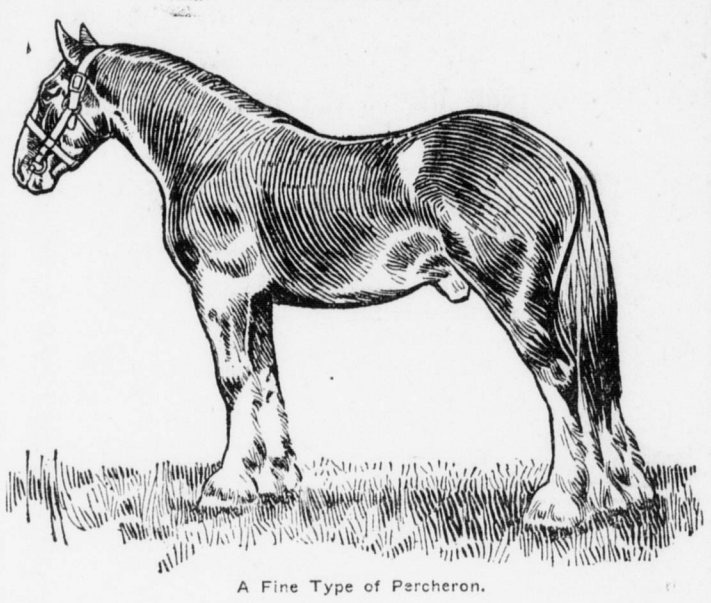
"I attribute my change in health and spirits to Postum alone."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

RAISING DRAFT HORSES IS PROFITABLE BUSINESS

Practical Breeder Gives Some Good, Sound Reasons Why Farmers Should Pay More Attention to Them.



A Fine Type of Percheron.

(By J. D. DUMIRE.)

The horse for the farmer is the draft-bred horse. He is the horse that can be raised by the common farmer with little trouble and expense. He is in reach of almost every farmer in the country. It is a profitable business on the farm to raise a few good colts. I say good colts, for it is just as easy to raise good ones as poor ones.

It is just as easy to raise good horses as good cattle or good sheep or good hogs. It does not pay to raise poor ones—leave that for the other fellow. The farmers that raise good stock of any kind are the men that select good sires. The men that have good herds and good flocks are the men that select pure-blood sires from one or the other of the several pure breeds and stick to the breed of their choice, if in cattle it is Shorthorns in a few years his herd is all the same type and color.

If it is Angus or Herefords, the results are the same. If this is true of cattle and sheep, it is certainly true of the horse. Fellow farmers, select a sire from one of the pure breeds of draft horses—Percheron, Shire or Belgian—it matters but little which breed.

It is only a matter of choice to the breeder himself. Be sure that the sire is a good individual. Breed just such mares as you have. The better the dam the better the result. Always breed their produce to a pure-bred sire of the same breed.

In a short time your mares are all alike and of the same type and disposition, all bearing a family resemblance. You will not have the disposition of a broncho in one and the trotting horse in the other, but you will have a class of horses that are easily handled, easily fitted for the market and an every-day market at home and abroad.

You need not spend any extra time and expense in looking after buyers; the buyers are always looking after this kind. If they get a wire-cut or blemish they are the kind that are useful to keep for any kind of farm work. A good mare with proper care will do just as much service on the farm and raise a colt as will a gelding, and you have the colts for the keep.

Never allow the colt to follow the dam when in harness at work, as the colt will do much better if left in the barn, and the dam will be better off without the colt. Give the little fellow some oats and bran in its trough; it will soon learn to eat and forget its dam.

A colt is easily weaned, and if proper care is taken it will not stop growing until it is matured. Breed in this way and in a very short time it will be almost impossible to raise a poor colt. Look at the farmer who breeds one year to a draft horse and the produce afterward bred to some cheap mongrel. His horses in ten years' breeding are no better than when he began. The price of service fees should hardly be considered. It is the matured horse to be considered. It costs as much to raise a low-priced horse as to raise a high-priced one. It is all in the breeding.

Always use a pure-bred draft sire—a better individual than the dam—and then you are sure of gaining. Select one breed or the other and stick to it and you will come out ahead and be on the right road to success in the horse-breeding business.

COW IS KEY TO SUCCESS

To Compete With Oleomargarine Makers Dairymen Must Study to Produce Butter Cheaply as Possible.

Liberal feeding does not produce profitable results unless the food is of the proper kind. Successful dairying depends on good cows and balanced rations.

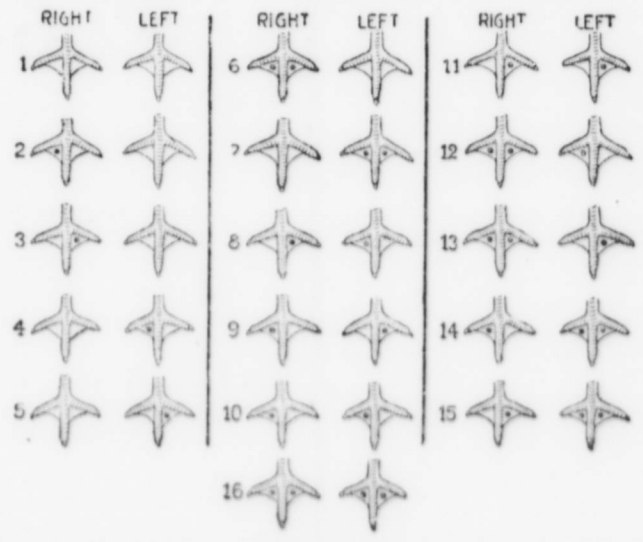
If dairymen expect to compete with the makers of oleomargarine they must study how to produce butter as cheaply as possible. Until consumers are educated to eat butter at high prices they will turn to the substitute at about a certain price for real butter.

It is estimated that one pound of butter is the amount one person who is not obliged to restrict his appetite will consume in one week. It is also estimated that for the 85,000,000 people in this country we produce only about 50,000,000 pounds of butter in a week.

If you had grown a few tons of mangels last year they would have come in handy during the winter just past—wouldn't they? Now is the time to think about mangels for next year. They are easily grown and are heavy yielders.

Selling whole milk to a cheese factory is selling the fertility of the farm out of a can. Feeding this milk to hogs, minus the butter fat, takes nothing from the farm, for a ton of butter fat is worth only about 75 cents as a fertilizer.

MARKS FOR IDENTIFICATION



The above diagram shows method of marking chicks so that 16 different flocks, ages or families may be identified by absence of punch marks as in No. 1, and by punch marks as shown in Nos. 2 to 16, says Farm Press. A good chick-size poultry punch may be had at small expense. Newly hatched chicks should always be punch-marked and a record kept of the date on which they were hatched; later the marks can be supplemented by leg banding, making it possible to positively identify many ages, flocks or families. Chicks should be punch-marked soon after hatching. Keep a record of your chicks this season.

Sheep in the World.

There are about 580,000,000 sheep in the world—Australia with 88,000,000 Argentine with 67,000,000 and the United States with 57,000,000 are the leading sheep countries.

WOMEN'S ILLS.

Many women who suffer with backache, bearing-down pain, headaches and nervousness do not know that these ailments are usually due to trouble with the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills remove the cause.

Mrs. Joseph Cross, Church St., Morrilton, Ark., says: "For weeks I was bent double by pain in my back and the kidney secretions were profuse. My feet and ankles were badly swollen and I had headaches and dizzy spells. Six doctors treated me without relief and I finally began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. They cured me."

Remember the name—Doan's.

BABY'S SCALP CRUSTED

"Our little daughter, when three months old, began to break out on the head and we had the best doctors to treat her, but they did not do her any good. They said she had eczema. Her scalp was a solid scale all over. The burning and itching was so severe that she could not rest, day or night. We had about given up all hopes when we read of the Cuticura Remedies. We at once got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and followed directions carefully. After the first dose of the Cuticura Resolvent, we used the Cuticura Soap freely and applied the Cuticura Ointment. Then she began to improve rapidly and in two weeks the scale came off her head and new hair began to grow. In a very short time she was well. She is now sixteen years of age and a picture of health. We used the Cuticura Remedies about five weeks, regularly, and then we could not tell she had been affected by the disease. We used no other treatments after we found out what the Cuticura Remedies would do for her. J. Fish and Ella M. Fish, Mt. Vernon, Ky., Oct. 12, 1909."

"Show Me Another."

Soon after twins had arrived at the home of a prominent dry goods merchant recently the proud father led his son Richard, aged four, into the room to see the little strangers. The father first pulled down the covers and showed one of the babies to his son. He then walked to the other side of the bed and exhibited the other twin. Richard gazed at the two for a moment with a noncommittal look on his face, and then demanded:

"Show me another, papa."

Understood the Sex.

His Daughter—Daddy, you were twenty-five when this was taken, weren't you? Why, you might have sat for it yesterday.

Her Father—M'yes; your mother's own daughter. Well, well, you'll find it on the table, I think.

His Daughter—Find what, daddy, darling?

Her Father—The checkbook, my own lamb.

FIRST FORK

Another old settler gone.

Uncle Tom Logan, of Wharton township, as he has been familiarly known for a great many years, died on Sunday about 3 p. m., at his old home in that place. We believe he was in his 86th year and had been suffering a long time with a complication of diseases principly of which was dropsy. He leaves one sister, Mrs. John Brooks, of East Fork; one daughter, Mrs. B. F. Ross; three sons, Arch, James, Bridge, and several grand children. We have not heard the particulars of the funeral, but interment will be made in Gilmore Cemetery at this place beside his wife, who preceded him a number of years ago.

C. E. Logue has bought the house and lot of Geo. Morton and is repairing the buildings, and a foundation laid for a two-story house and will probably open a "Bear Hunter's Paradise," about Oct. 1st and then if they are as thick as they were last year there will be something doing.

Mr. King has opened up Dental Rooms at First Fork and is turning out some first class work.

The teachers are all hired for the four schools in Grove township and all home talent as follows: Miss Stella Logue, Gilmore School; Miss Drum, of Sinnmahoning, Bailey School; Miss Mildred Haynes, Haynes School; Miss Pitts, Miller School.

Dr. Mansuy, of Austin, was called to see your correspondent at this place, who has been "under the weather" for some time, and is it any wonder, such weather as we have had?

The people expect to start for Texas in about a week.
